GOVERNMENT AID TO AGRICULTURE

manure is carefully explained as the way of handling the farm manure is discussed. He keeps the same unit all the time on the land; now he has to apply the said manure to the land, what crops respond best to the said manures, and thus give the best yield. At what period in the growth of the said crop or crops this manure should be applied to the land and, in fact everything pertaining to practical farming is taken up in detail, and a considered as to the special vicinity in which the meeting is being held. Everything connected with this work is given and advice is given as to the methods advised here in the U.S. nothing is advised. In fact, nothing is advised that has not first been thoroughly tested on the farm. All local conditions are especially considered, especially as to the particular soil and its adaptability to whether it is a flat, rolling, or hilly soil. The officers of the bank are: P. Fleetwood, president; West, vice-president; H. Fleetwood, cashier; J. W. West, assistant cashier; E. B. Addison, Director; P. Fleetwood, teller; Directors—P. Fleetwood, J. W. West, H. A. Gray, J. F. West, C. S. Parsons, G. B. Partridge, H. Fleetwood, J. E. Wilcox, E. B. Burr.

Churches and Schools.

Waverly is a moral town, abounding in churches and schools. The Waverly School here is one of the best in the State, and in addition there is a splendid little preparatory school, known as the Waverly Home-Institute. It is open to young men prepared for college, but a limited number of small boys are admitted to the classrooms. This excellent school is conducted by Miss Alice Pasteur, principal, who is an educator of decided ability. Mrs. F. E. May is the principal.
